Biography

Markus Ehrenhöfer, also known as Kapellmeister Ehrenhöfer, is a versatile electronic music producer and live act artist based in Vienna, Austria. His style ranges from groovy, contemporary house to dreamy, progressive harmonies, powerful deep basslines, and melodic techno.
Growing up in a musical environment, he went through numerous stages on his musical journey. As a child, he learned drums, electric bass, and trumpet, performing in a traditional brass band. He also gained experience in a choir and taught himself piano, further expanding his musical education.
Inspired by friends and various artists, he found his way into the world of electronic music. In doing so, he discovered the potential to merge his diverse musical influences, cultivating a deep passion for electronic sounds.

One of my absolute favorite things to do is listen to music on big, high-quality, finely tuned sound systems. Another one of my absolute favorites is making and producing music. Combining the two is my ultimate dream — something that makes life as worth living as it can possibly be for me. And if I can pass on and share that feeling and enthusiasm through my own music, it fulfills me deeply.

When I create music, it feels as if time stands still; everything else fades away, and I find myself completely immersed in the mo¬ment, free from all worries. In this space, deeply buried emotions are unveiled, allowing me to reflect on life and tell stories through sound — expressions that words alone cannot convey. These moments bring a profound sense of awareness, making me feel as if I’m doing exactly what I was meant to do, experiencing true fulfillment.
I strive to capture feelings like these and share them with others, while creating an environment where people can connect emotionally and fully embrace the present.
