Biography

Monochronique, the artistic alias of Munich-based DJ Stoyan Dafov, has been connected to electronic music since the mid-1990s, when the underground club culture across Europe was shaping a new era of sound, experimentation, and musical expression.

Inspired by the progressive sounds of artists such as Sasha and John Digweed, the atmospheric productions of Underworld and Orbital, and the forward-thinking spirit of pioneers like Laurent Garnier and Sven Väth, he developed an appreciation for music that goes beyond the beat. For Monochronique, electronic music has always been about atmosphere, emotion, and the art of taking listeners on a journey.

His current sound lies at the intersection of progressive house and organic house, bringing together hypnotic grooves, evolving melodies, warm basslines, intricate percussion, and atmospheric textures. By combining the forward momentum of progressive house with the earthy, organic character of organic house, he creates sets that feel immersive, fluid, and emotionally engaging. His musical selections unfold naturally, balancing subtle transitions and deep, introspective moments with the energy and movement of the dancefloor.

Since 2007, Monochronique has hosted his own radio show, developing a platform for musical discovery and sharing his passion for carefully curated electronic music. The show reflects his commitment to exploring new sounds while maintaining a connection to the roots and timeless spirit of underground dance culture.

A defining chapter in his journey was his three-year residency at Munich's Green Room Club. During this period, he refined his approach behind the decks, developed a deeper understanding of dancefloor dynamics, and established a stronger connection with the local electronic music community. Alongside his residency, he has performed at numerous intimate clubs, local underground gatherings, open-air sessions, and other events, bringing his distinctive musical approach to a variety of settings.

Whether setting the atmosphere early in the evening, building momentum through a carefully layered progression, or creating an immersive experience under the open sky, Monochronique approaches every set as a story told through sound. His selections reflect a balance between the timeless influences of 1990s electronic music and the evolving landscape of contemporary progressive and organic house.

Based in Munich, Monochronique continues to explore the meeting point between rhythm, melody, and atmosphere, delivering thoughtful, sophisticated sets for listeners who appreciate depth, musical continuity, and a genuine connection to the dancefloor.

For Monochronique, every set is an opportunity to create a shared experience through music, where organic textures meet progressive movement and every transition contributes to the journey.
