Biography

About The Communal Well Based in Paris, France, The Communal Well is an Americana ensemble built on the spirit of collaboration. While the group operates as a core trio with Olivier Horvais and Philippe Huisset, we function as a musical "community," pulling in different guest artists depending on the night to create a unique, ever-evolving sound. The Meaning Behind the Name Our name is inspired by the communal wells found in European towns—gathering places where people share essential resources. We aim for our music to be that same gathering place, connecting audiences through shared stories and "communal" songwriting. Our Sound We specialize in exploration, honoring the raw storytelling of the early 20th century and 1970s analog sounds. Our sets are a mix of country, blues, bluegrass, and folk, featuring authentic instruments like slide guitar, flute, harmonica, and double bass. For bookings contact Roger rhoeb@yahoo.com
